

Whole-Systems Healing for the Self and Much More

Stephen Busby & Nadine Beaumart

Berlin, 4th and 5th September 2010

What is our individual world-work? What are the next evolutionary steps which life is inviting us to take? What obstacles do we find on the path and where may there be movement?

During this Academy of Inner Science weekend event we will use new discoveries in systemic constellation and inner presencing work to explore where flows of energy in us may best be facilitated, inviting change into our lives.

Working creatively and intuitively with space and the body, we will touch upon some underlying dynamics which support us in meeting our full life-potential. This will bring insight to what holds us back and help to free us from illness or addictive habits, so that we face our choices with a deeper awareness of the whole. We may gain a felt understanding of how we need to act, leading to more sustainable and holistic answers to our questions. This work can be a powerful channel for personal and whole-system healing, and you may bring to it any personal relational or health issues, or professional concerns, or any wider social or family issues you may have. This will strengthen us as individuals and bring movement to all the systems – intimate and planetary – of which we are a part.

We will work in English and be creative with language, ensuring that basic needs are met and German translation provided when needed. We ask that you have a minimum level of English.

Stephen works with a group of pioneers in systemic work (taking it into schools, prisons and hospitals) and participates in Thomas Hübl's research in collective intelligence and whole-system healing. He lives in the Findhorn Community in Scotland, is a consultant in companies and organisations, and is developing new forms of coaching for evolutionary potential.

Nadine is a trainer, coach and project leader in diversity management and intercultural work in the not-for-profit and public sectors. She is also an artist and is developing a new healing and dialogue practice. She is based in Bremen and is a passionate advocate and practitioner of new human potential and research in Thomas Hübl's Transparent Communication.
